

The Holocaust

The story of the Holocaust is one of the saddest chapters in human history. During World War II, over 6 million Jewish men, women, and children were killed in death camps. The German leader, Adolph Hitler, hated Jewish people. When he became Chancellor of Germany, he made laws to limit the freedoms of Jewish people. His political party, the Nazi Party, distributed anti-Semitic or anti-Jewish propaganda to the German people. During the war, Hitler rounded up all Jewish people who were still in Germany and Nazi-controlled territories. Many had already left or were in hiding, but some had nowhere to go. The Jewish people were sent to concentration camps. Some of the camps were labor¹ camps. The prisoners were treated inhumanely² and forced to work hard hours. Many died because they were too weak to keep working. Other camps were death camps. No one who went in came out alive.

Hitler, who had brown hair and brown eyes, wanted a country of all white, blue-eyed, blond-haired citizens. He thought that the Aryan or white race was superior to other races. Hitler called anything having to do with the treatment of Jewish people, "The Jewish Question." His government referred to its own anti-Semitic policies as an answer to "The Jewish Question." Extermination³ camps were called, "The Final Solution."

When the world found out about the Holocaust, people were shocked and horrified. Other governments had an idea about Hitler's anti-Jewish feelings and policies. But no one knew the extent of the horror. How could 6 million people, in the modern world, be killed for no reason other than their ethnicity, or cultural background? People asked themselves these questions. We will probably never know the answers. It is important to remember the Holocaust and to study what happened. Only by understanding this bleak⁴ part of history can we prevent such horror from happening again.

² inhumane: not human; lacking pity or kindness; not fit for humans

³ extermination: complete and immediate extinction by killing off all individuals
